THE DATA PRESENTED IN THIS BOOK WERE GATHERED AS PART OF A PROJECT TO ANALYZE THE NON-STANDARD DIALECT OF ENGLISH SPOKEN BY NEGRO CHILDREN IN WASHINGTON, D.C. THE ULTIMATE AIM OF THE PROJECT IS TO PRODUCE THE BASIC LINGUISTIC INFORMATION ESSENTIAL TO PROGRAMS FOR TEACHING STANDARD ENGLISH TO THESE CHILDREN. THE TAPE RECORDINGS USED IN THIS STUDY ARE AVAILABLE FROM THE CENTER FOR APPLIED LINGUISTICS AND ARE FREE, SPONTANEOUS CONVERSATIONS RECORDED IN A SPECIAL "SOUND STUDIO" INSTALLED IN A LOW-INCOME NEIGHBORHOOD OF WASHINGTON. THE PASSAGES SELECTED FROM THE RECORDINGS FOR TRANSCRIPTION ARE CONVERSATIONS BETWEEN MEMBERS OF A FAMILY GROUP AND NEIGHBORHOOD CHILDREN. A MODIFIED STANDARD ORTHOGRAPHY WAS USED FOR THE TRANSCRIPTION WITH PROSODIC ASPECTS TRANSCRIBED IN A MODIFIED TRAGER-SMITH SYSTEM. THE LANGUAGE DATA CONTAINED IN THESE TEXTS WILL SERVE AS THE BASIS FOR FURTHER LINGUISTIC AND ANTHROPOLOGICAL STUDIES. COPIES OF THIS BOOK ARE ALSO AVAILABLE FOR $4.00 FROM THE CENTER FOR APPLIED LINGUISTICS, 1717 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, N.W., WASHINGTON, D.C., 20036. (JD)

INTRODUCTION TO THE SERIES

The Urban Language Series is intended to make available the results of recent sociolinguistic research concerned with the position and role of language in a large metropolitan area. The series includes descriptions of certain aspects of urban language, particularly English, as well as theoretical considerations relevant to such descriptions. The series also includes studies dealing with fieldwork techniques, matters of pedagogy and relationships of urban language study to other disciplines. Where appropriate and feasible, accompanying tape recordings will be made available. Specifically excluded from consideration are aspects of English as a second language or second language learning in general.

It is hoped that the Urban Language Series will prove useful to several different kinds of readers. For the linguist, the series will provide data for the study of language performance and for the development of linguistic theory. Historically, linguists have formulated theory from individual rather than group performance. They have had to generalize about what constitutes "standard" or "non-standard" from intuitive judgments or from very limited data. This series is designed to make available large portions of language data as well as analyses in order to broaden the knowledge from which linguistic generalizations may come.

For the sociologist the series will provide access to the nature of social stratification by means of language. It is the contention of some scholars that a person's use of language is one of the most important cues to his social status, age, race or sex.

For the educator, the series will offer among other things a description of the very things which are most crucial to the classroom—the linguistic correlates which separate the accepted from the unaccepted.

Although the value of focussed attention on the special problems of urban language has been recognized for some time, relatively few substantial studies have been published. To a certain degree, this series represents a pioneering venture on the part of the Center for Applied Linguistics.

CONVERSATIONS IN A NEGRO AMERICAN DIALECT

PREFACE

The present volume is based on data which were collected and analyzed during research investigations conducted by the Urban Language Study and Materials Development Project, a project of the Center for Applied Linguistics. One of the objectives of the project is to analyze the non-standard dialect of English spoken by school-age Negro children of a lower socio-economic stratum in the District of Columbia with the aim of producing scientific information on which a sound approach to the teaching of standard English to these children can ultimately be based. The project was initiated in late 1965 with funds provided by the Ford Foundation. Subsequent financial support has been provided by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation.

THE RECORDINGS

The collection of data for the Urban Language Study has been based partly on the systematic elicitation method (interviews with informants under specially controlled conditions), partly on the recordings of free, spontaneous conversations. Some of these recordings were made in a sound studio at the Center for Applied Linguistics, others were made in a sound studio installed in a small one-family house, the Yellow House, in Northwest Washington. The Yellow House is located on a small street, 'Winston Place', which may be regarded as typical of the central, low-income area within Washington, D.C. The surrounding block was also investigated from a sociological-anthropological point of view, as a parallel to the linguistic study.

The Yellow House consists of a basement, a first floor with a living room and a small kitchen, and a second floor with one bedroom and bath. The electronic equipment was installed on the first floor. The speakers were usually seated on a couch directly below the two "Lipstik" microphones which were mounted in the ceiling, covered with acoustic material. The control board was installed in a small closet behind the kitchen, where the technician could follow the recordings visually and through earphones, without distracting the participants in the conversations. The recordings were made with a stereophonic Ampex PR-10 2 tape recorder*; the equipment included two Ampex preamplifiers and the Altex M-20 Microphone System.

As a part of the ULS project, a series of free conversations with children ten years old (FC-10) was recorded at the Yellow House between September and December 1966. The whole series consists of 30 recordings, each recording containing approximately 30 to 40 minutes of speech.

The primary purpose of this recording program was to provide texts for a study of the intonation and stress patterns of the 'Winston Place Dialect', especially as it is spoken by ten-year-old children. Four children were selected as the main informants for the study: Michael, Gregory, Jacqueline, and Anita. All of them were born at Winston Place or in the immediate neighborhood. According to the original plan, each one of these four children were to participate in four types of speech event:

(a) to talk with another boy and another girl of approximately the same age;

(b) to talk with an adult from their own family (father or mother) or from a family in the neighborhood;

* Speed: 15 ips.; frequency response: 15 ips.—± 2 db 30–18000 cps.; flutter and wow: 15 ips.—0.11% max.

(c) to talk with a member of the ULS staff;

(d) to talk all alone, e.g., tell a story in front of a small mixed audience.

This arrangement was planned to provide a varied corpus from which it would be possible to describe general tendencies in the prosodic system of the dialect, and also to discover characteristic variations correlated with age, sex, and status of the interlocutor. For various reasons, it was not possible to carry out this program in all its details. For instance, Gregory, who otherwise was very active and cooperative, was not very successful as a story-teller (speech event (d)).

All the recordings were to some extent prearranged. The families living on the block had given a general permission to the Center for Applied Linguistics, allowing members of the ULS staff to make recordings with children on the block. Furthermore, in each case the parents were informed in advance of the time and the people to take part in the special recording sessions. As many of the recordings were made during the school hour, special arrangements also had to be made with the local school officials.

It was hardly possible for the informants to detect the microphones in the ceiling; they were of course aware of the fact that they were being recorded, but this seems to have had little negative effect on their spontaneity or their willingness to participate in the recordings.

As a rule the choice of topics for the conversations was quite accidental; often a sequence of utterances developed spontaneously after a period of silence. In other cases the topics were suggested to the participants, particularly in the case of the conversations including story-telling and the playing of simple verbal games. Earlier experiences had shown that it was, in general, very difficult to keep the children on a special topic. As a rule the assistants and the director of the recordings tried to interfere as little as possible during the recording sessions. The exception was of course the four conversations between the children and the white research assistant (speech event (c)); here the assistant was instructed to talk very actively to the children, to ask them questions, and to try to make them formulate thoughts and impressions somewhat beyond their everyday experiences.

Three members of the ULS staff participate in the conversations: Margy Gurney, Sandy Barrett, and Bengt Loman. The former two are research assistants who were associated with community programs at the block before coming to work for the Urban Language Study. As is shown by the conversations, they were well-known to many of the neighborhood's inhabitants. Margy Gurney is white, Sandy Barrett is a Negro. Both are in their twenties.

The series was planned and directed by Bengt Loman, who is also responsible for the sound quality of the recordings.

THE INFORMANTS

From the recordings, shorter passages were selected for further analysis and description; in general these passages concentrate on a single family group and are characterized by natural spontaneous speech. Altogether these texts contain approximately 22,450 words. About 20 percent of the text material consists, however, of utterances spoken by Margy Gurney, the white research assistant. See Table 1.

As already mentioned, the selection of informants was based on the principle of variations according to sex, age, and interlocutor. The primary consideration within this general framework was, however, the degree of verbal ability and verbal activity among the tested speakers and their willingness to participate in the recordings. The final choice was very much based on the recommendations of Margy Gurney and her long acquaintance with the people on the block. See Table 2.

The choice of informants was centered around Michael Jones, a friendly and easy-going boy with a wide range of emotions and a rich variety of expressions (as is clearly shown from the tapes). It was also natural to select his cousin Gregory as another informant for the series--Michael is one of Gregory's best friends (cf. Conversation 12). The boys' parents represent the older generation. The selection of girls for the recordings was more accidental. Michael and Gregory have no sisters of about the same age, and no other choice of girl informants seemed obvious. Jacqueline and Anita are, however, very good friends, and occasionally they also play with the two boys. It was rather difficult to start a conversation between Michael and Jacqueline (who are the most talkative of the four children), so a verbal game had to be arranged as a stimulus ('How many stores do you know in the neighborhood?'; cf. Conversation 2). The little girl Bonita Smith came into the recording series more by an accident.

A more detailed study of the social background of the informants will be included in an anthropological study by Ulf Hannerz. Only some brief biographical data will be given here.

Harry Jones is an unskilled construction worker. He was born in 1927 in Waverly, Sussex County, Virginia. He left school after he had completed the fourth grade. He came to Washington in 1951, and has been living with his family at Winston Place since 1956. He visits his home county in southern Virginia three or four times a year. Sometimes the family also visits his relatives in Kentucky.

Harry's wife Patricia was also born in 1927 and in the same neighborhood. They got married before they moved from Sussex to Washington. They now have five children: Maria (born in 1952), Terry (1954), Harry Lee (1955), Michael (1956), and Marshall (1958). These children are all mentioned in the conversations (especially in Conversations 2, 6, and 12).

From her eighth year and until she finished high school at eighteen, Patricia was working for a family in her home county. Later she worked, for longer or shorter periods, for families in Camden, N.J., in Philadelphia, and in Norfolk, Virginia. She has also worked as a housekeeper for white families in the Washington area. She usually leaves her home at nine o'clock in the morning, and comes back at about six o'clock in the evening. During later years her daughter has had to be responsible for much of the housework in the home.

Michael was about ten years old at the time of the recordings (in Conversation 11 he describes his tenth birthday). He was in the fourth grade (and had to repeat fourth grade for the following school year).

Albert, who is Harry's younger brother, was born in 1934. He completed the ninth grade in school in Waverly, Virginia, and moved to Washington at the age of twenty-one. His wife, Alice, was born in Washington, and completed the eleventh grade at Cardozo High School. Albert and Alice have been married for ten years; they have seven children: Gregory (born in 1956), Charmaine (1959), Terry (1960), Maurice (1961), Lewis (1961), Albert (1964), and Wesley (1965). Gregory was in the fourth grade at the time of the recordings. The family has been living at Winston Place for a couple of years. At the time of the recordings, Albert was unemployed because of a long period of illness.

Of the three girls represented in the recordings, Jacqueline is the oldest, born in 1955; Anita was born in 1956, and Bonita in 1960.

Jacqueline's mother was born in 1933, in North Carolina, but she has been living in Washington since her third year. A widow, she has seven children; the oldest, Virginia, was born in 1949; Anthony, the youngest, was born in 1961. The household now consists of the mother, the seven children, and the grandmother, who takes care of the house during the day while Jacqueline's mother is working as a custodian. The household also includes the three children of Jacqueline's sister Virginia, plus Jacqueline's mother's sister and her four-year-old son. Jacqueline was in the sixth grade at the time of recordings.

Anita's mother was born in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1927, but has lived in Washington since 1933. She has nine children (born between 1942 and 1961), and eleven grandchildren. All the children were born in Washington, and the family has lived for six years in the house they now occupy at Winston Place. Anita's mother has been separated from her husband for several years. She takes care of her household and also assists a storefront church minister in her activities. Anita was in the fourth grade at the time of the recordings.

Bonita's mother was born in Maryland in 1927 and has nine children. Her two oldest children were born in Newark, N.J. (in 1942 and 1947), while her other children were all born in Washington. The family has now lived for about twenty years in a house at Winston Place. Bonita, who was born in 1960, is the eighth child and has one younger sister, born in 1961.

Bonita's mother, who is a widow, works as a housekeeper for a white suburban family. Bonita had just started kindergarten at the time of the recordings.

Some general characteristics may be noted on the basis of these biographical notes. The children used as informants in these recordings were all born in Washington and have lived all their lives at Winston Place (or in its immediate surroundings). Their parents have come from Southern states, and the families still have contact with relatives in the South, whom they visit regularly and also invite to their homes. Some of the women in the families work as housekeepers or househelpers in white middle class families, which exposes them to the cultural patterns and ideals of the white middle class. This is particularly noticeable in Patricia Jones in her conversations with the children (Conversations 6-8).

THE TRANSCRIPTION

Selected passages from the recordings were transcribed in a modified standard orthography. Originally the purpose of this transcription was only to serve as a basis for a prosodic analysis. Later it became obvious that the texts also could be used for a discussion of certain segmental phonological phenomena which are at least partly correlated with the prosodic features. This motivated a thorough revision of the preliminary transcription. The most recent transcription includes notation of consonant reduction, substitution, and assimilation, and certain other characteristic phonemena of the consonant system, e.g. various phones corresponding to Standard American /θ/ and /ð/, variation between [ŋ] and [ŋg], occurrences of nasal vowels and glottal stops. Interjections are written in phonetic transcription; this is also done for some unintelligible or drastically deviant words and sound sequences.

On occasion it has been extremely difficult to hear a special single word, or a phone or a sequence of phones. In such cases the debatable phone or phones have been written in parenthesis. It has, for instance, been very difficult in many cases to hear whether a word ends in a vowel or in an unreleased stop, characteristic of the dialect.

(...) means that a shorter passage, usually just a few words, has been omitted because of unintelligibility.

A full line of dots means that a longer utterance or a sequence of utterances has been omitted in connection with the editing of the recorded texts.

The prosodic aspects of the texts have also been analyzed and transcribed. In the transcription the following phenomena have been considered:

Pauses: (p)

Terminal junctures: # || |

Degrees of stress: ˊ (primary stress)
ˋ (secondary stress)
˘ (weak stress--unmarked)

Pitch levels (from low to high): ¹ ² ³ ⁴

The prosodic transcription is an adaptation of the Trager-Smith system, but with some important modifications. As a rule, terminal junctures have only been marked in the position immediately before a pause (p). The juncture system is used to describe characteristic features of the articulation in that position. These features may be described in terms of a double set of contrasts:

The double bar juncture /‖/ is characterized by a short final rise in the fundamental frequency; this rise opposes the double bar juncture to the two other types of terminal juncture.

The single bar juncture /|/ is characterized by sustained or increased intensity combined with sustained fundamental frequency.

The double cross juncture /#/ is characterized by absence of final intensity, while the fundamental frequency may be either sustained or, more often, lowered (changes in frequency in this case are always marked by numbers indicating the pitch levels).

Laughter has been noted in the transcriptions: (LAUGHS) refers to the individual speaker indicated in the transcription; (LAUGHTER) refers to a group of speakers or to an unidentified participant in the conversation.

Underlinings indicate the simultaneous speech of two speakers. In some cases, where uncertainty may arise as to which sequences are uttered simultaneously, the symbols (^{x}) and (^{z}) are used for identification.

In some cases, the occurrences of laughter and of simultaneous speech may give a clue to the analysis of prosodic patterns, e.g. the use of a special high or rising pitch.

The transcription is based on an auditory analysis. Each text has been played repeatedly at both normal (15 ips) and low speed ($7\frac{1}{2}$ ips). Sometimes the auditory impression of pitch and stress varied according to speed conditions; in such cases the transcription was based on the impression at normal speed. The tape recorder used for the transcription was an Ampex PR 10 with stereo earphones of the type Telex-Dyna Twin, two high-fidelity Ampex loudspeakers, and two Altex amplifiers.

The texts form the material for two special studies which will soon appear: Intonation and Stress Patterns in a Negro American Dialect, by Bengt Loman; and Conversations in a Negro American Dialect: Anthropological Comments, by Ulf Hannerz. Also in preparation is a study of phonotactic patterns, by Bengt Loman, based on the material in these texts.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I should like to thank my colleagues at the Center for Applied Linguistics for their contributions to the production of these texts, especially Margaret Liske and Sandy Barrett, who assisted during the recordings, Carolyn Cunningham, who did the preliminary glossing, Ulf Hannerz, who took part in the selection of texts for this volume and who also has added certain paralinguistic features to the transcriptions, Dr. Catherine Garvey and Dr. William Nemser, who checked the transcriptions and suggested many important improvements, and, finally, Frank A. Rice and staff members of the Center's Publications Section who assisted in the painstaking and time-consuming editorial preparation of the manuscript.
